Dear Sir or Madam,

I have heard, with interest, about a programming position at your company from an online source. I have just around six months of experience doing similar work on my own projects and through self-study. While I know that six months is not a lot of experience, I believe I possess the necessary skills and attitude you are seeking and would make a valuable addition to your team. Here's a brief view of what I have to offer:

I am polite, attentive to detail and ready to help when it comes to working on new and different projects or with clients. I have a degree in Mathematics and have experience in handling difficult problems and being able to solve them in a creative but effective way. The math courses that I have taken have increased my skill of logical and quantitative reasoning to problem solving. I have used languages and typesetting programs in the past such as R and TeX for class projects while using my oral and writing ability to present them.

Recently, I found enjoyment in programming and in solving problems through code rather than with pen and paper. I found resources online with the help of GitHub and CodePen, but mainly went through documentation of libraries while moving through the freeCodeCamp curriculum. In four months time I received many certifications with my last one being a Full-Stack. While mostly covering JavaScript, I worked with various libraries and other techs such as: React, D3, jQuery, Node/Express, MongoDB/Mongoose, mLab, and more. I believe it shows when looking at my work that not only am I quick to learn but also the quality of my applications are not lost. I am currently focusing on bettering my full stack apps along with being more efficient with JavaScript.

As my attached resume indicates a more detailed look at my past work experiences and education, please also take a look at my provided website for a closer look at my projects. Thank you for taking your time to consider my application. I look forward to speaking with you regarding your available position.

Sincerely,
Waylan Hedine
